

17th and 18th Century Nichols Newspapers Collection

The Nichols Collection was purchased by Oxford University's Bodleian Library in 1865, and has never been digitised. Part of the collection has been previously available on microfilm, but the new 17th and 18th Century Nichols Newspapers Collection digitised archive provides the whole collection for the first time, including never before digitised newspapers.

Various source media, 17th and 18th Century Nichols Newspapers Collection that knows every thing.

OVER 250 TITLES OF NEWSPAPERS AND PERIODICALS ALONGSIDE OVER 250 PAMPHLETS AND BROADSHEETS

The 17th and 18th Century Nichols Newspapers Collection features the newspapers and periodicals, as well as pamphlets and broadsheets, that form the Nichols newspaper collection held at the Bodleian Library in Oxford, UK. All 296 volumes of bound material, covering the period 1672-1737, are presented in digitised format. Many early English newspapers have otherwise been lost, making this collection an invaluable resource for a range of research topics, forming a comprehensive mine of political and religious information of the period, and of the contemporary reactions to it.
